THE ELEMENTS AGAINST THE BILL

Wall Street Straining Every Nerve to Hold Down Both Parties.

MONDAY THE BILL COMES UP AGAIN

When Its Fate Will Be Speedily Determined-An Analysis of Thursday's Vote. Washington, March 25 .- (Special.)-

The goldbugs claim yesterday's fight to be a victory, and are yelling vociferously today that they have the fight won. But they have not by any means The Situation Serious.

Still the situation is serious. It is not by any means a certainty now that the house is going to pass the free coinage bill, though the chances favor it. Mr. Bland introduced a resoluton today, fixing Monday as the day for ordering the previous question on the silver bill, which went over with adjournment last night. It was referred to the committee on rules. That committee will meet and report it back to the house Monday morning, if General Catchings returns by that time. He is down in Mississippi. If he does not return until Monday, then the resolution will be reported Tuesday, amended so as to fix a specified hour on that day for ordering the previous question. On such a report from the committee on rules, there can be but two dilatory motions. Thus the goldbugs cannot filibuster. They will, however, make their fight on the resolution. If they kill that, the bill is

The Plan for Monday. Thus, when the resolution is brought in, one of the goldbug leaders or a republican will move to lay it upon the table. On this motion the great fight will be. It will decide the battle.

Tom Reed has promised the anti-silver democrats that he will deliver to them the almost entire republican vote. The eighty-three dimocratic voters last night claim to have three more who will be here Monday. With these they claim they will table the resolution by two or three majority. On the other hand, while the free coinage democrats are making no boasts, they have been figuring carefully all day, and tonight have reached the conclusion that if they can hold all their men in the hall, that they will pass the resolution by a majority of four. When it comes to a direct vote on the bill, they believe they can count on at least twenty majority. But the great danger to free coinage will be on the motion to table the resolution from the committee on rules fixing the hour for the final vote.

The New York Lobby.

The enormous New York lobby is working with an enthusiasm never before seen Washington. They are about the halls of congress and in the hotel corridors as thick as black birds in a harvest field. They are bringing every possible influnce to bear upon democratic members, claiming, among other things, that the passage of the bill will make New York a republican state, and will absolutely destroy the democratic party. Personalism Versus the Party, Nearly every Cleveland democrat in the house is fighting the bill, if not by vote by his influence and encouragement of the op-position. These men know that if the bill s adopted, it means the political death of Grover Cleveland and they seem willing to sacrifice the interests of the party and the people to advance the fortunes of this man. It is a serious situation for the democratic party. If the bill is atted by the democratic house, it will give the third party in the country at the proposed of the party in the country and the present a transporter. in the south and the west a tremendous boost. The farmers will claim that it a house of representatives that is democratic The farmers will claim that if a by a third majorty will not giv them this paltry slice of financial relief, they can never hope for anything from the democratic party, and had just as well get out of it. Still there are democrats and southern and west-ern democrats, too, who are willing to sacentire party because of the cry that has gone up from the money rings of voting to shelve the bill, when they would not dare to vote against it on a direct vote. Their excuse will be that there was no hope of making it a law now, and in their judg ment it was best to postpone it until after the election, but they cannot fool their constituencies by any such talk as this. It is simply a combination of the rump end of the democratic party with the republicans to defeat the will of the people of this country in the interest of the money power and Mr. Cleveland's candidacy.

The vote on Monday or Tuesday will be very close. The majority vote on the resolution fixing a vote will not be a half dozen either way.

On a Square Vote. On a square vote, with every man voting the resolution should be adopted by 405 majority. That is counting every man just as od last night, and counting those who will be here Monday, who were not present yesterday. The danger to the bill lies in the work that is being done against it and the pliable backbones of some of the silver men. Some of them dodged last night, and unless corralled, forced up to the rail and compelled to vote one way or the other, they will dodge. There seem to be few enthusiastic leaders on the free coinage side. Mr. Bland cannot do it all, and none of the old leaders will come to the front. Mr. Mills and the Breckinridges have voted for the bill on all the votes, but are apparent ly taking no interest in the fight. Speaker Crisp is an ardent free coinage man. By his vote he saved the bill yesterday, but he can take no active part in the contest. For coming to the rescue of the silver bill and saving the day yesterday, he is applauded by the people of this country from one end to the other. Telegrams by the score have come in upon him from everywhere today, praising him for his act. Only the eastern goldbugs are criticising him, and they are doing it in a mild sort of way, for they cannot help admiring him for standing by his convic-tions and acting as he believes, when his vote was the only thing that could save Setting Colonel Elliott Right. The announcement that Colonel Elliott, of South Carolina, voted aginst the silver bill last night, was a mistake. He was absent but paired in favor of the bill.

The Vote Analyzed.

In view of the extreme closeness of the two sides on the silver question, as disclosed last night, an analysis of the tie vote on the test motion of Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, to lay the Bland bill on the table, will be interesting. On this motion each side secured 148 votes, and thirty-five members are put down as not voting, of which number The Congressional Record shows that twenty were announced to be paired on this vote. be paired on this vote, leaving fifteen un-paired. Of the 148 votes cast in favor of the motion eighty-two were cast by the dem-ocratic members of the house, and sixty-six by republican members. The negative vote shows the names of eleven republic-ans, the other 137 being either democrats or alliancemen or alliancemen.

The unexpectedly large showing of democratic votes against the silver bill came from the following states: New York, 19; Pennsylvania, 10; Wisconsin, 7; Massachusetts, 7; Iowa, 5; New Jersey, Ohio and Maryland, 4 each; Illinois, Connecticut and Michigan, 3 each; New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Louisians, and Minpesotis, 2 each; Island, Louisiana and Minnesota, 2 each; South Carolina, 1 (Brawley); Delaware, 1; West Virginia, 1 (Wilson); Missouri, 1 (Cobb); and California, 1 (Geary).

The eleven republican votes opposed to the Burrows motion are scattered over the far west, only one vote—that of Vincent A. Taylor, of Ohio—coming from east of the Mississippi river. Kansas contributed two in Broderick and Funston; South Datwo in Broderick and Funston; South Da-kota two more, Fickler and Jolley, while the other six votes came from as many dif-ferent states: Colorado. Townsend: Wyo-ming, Clark; Nevada, Barline; California, Bowers; Idaho, Sweet, and Oregon, Her-Pars announced were as follows: Enoch with Tarsney, Swanford with Ellicit, Durborow with Hooker (Mississippi), Morse with Cachings, E. B. Taylor, of Ohio, with Oates, Vanhorn with Johnstone (South Carolina), Henderson (Illinois) with Peel, Rusk with Compton, and W. A. Stone with Jones (Virginia), the names first given in each case being members who would have voted against the bill and in the latter those who would have voted for the measure.

Following is a list of the members who Following is a list of the members who were not announced as paired, and who failed to vote enuer way: Campbell, Wadsworth and Stahlnecker, of New York; Forman, Wike and Springer, of Illinois; Cooper, of Indiana; Clover, of Kansas: Cheatham, of North Carolina; Donovan, of Ohio; Shell, of South Carolina; Herbert, of Alabama; Lester, of Virginia; Boatner, of Louisiana, and Enloe, of Tennessee.

Before the vote was finally announced, Herbert and Enloe asked the right to vote, but, under the rules, were refused. Their Herbert and Enloe asked the right to vote, but, under the rules, were refused. Their votes would have offset each other, thus leaving thirteen men on whose votes in an absolutely full house the result would have hinged. Of these thirteen members, Clover, Cooper, Lester of Virginia, Shell and Wike, on the subsequent test vote, voted with the silver men, and Wadsworth with the antisilver men, while pairs in favor of the bill were announced on the part of Boatner and Forman, and against the bill for Stahlnecker.

These announcements show seven mor These announcements show seven more votes for the silverites and two more for the anti-silverites, leaving Timothy J. Campbell, of New York: Cheatham, a republican of North Carolina; Donovan, of Ohio, and Springer still unaccounted for. This, on an absolute full vote, shows at least one majority for the silver men. But, in this comection, it must be stated that a full vote is practically unknown in the house, and that the silver men concede that, when it comes to a very close vote. that, when it comes to a very close very they are less able than their opponents they are less able than their opponents to count on every member.

The situation is less encouraging to the silver men when they come to consider the future course, as the large showing made has unquestionably strengthened their ophas unquestionably strengthened their op-ponents, and some men, who have always ponents, and some men, who have always voted in favor of free coinage, have since expressed themselves as disinclined, for political reasons, to further push the matter. To what extent this feeling would influence subsequent votes is unknown.

Jackson, Miss., March 25.—(Special.)— Representative R. H. Taylor, of Newton, has been absent from his seat since Monday, and it is currently reported his absence is connected with the disappearance of a young lady of Newton, a Miss Watkins. Taylor left suddenly Monday, going to Madison in a buggy and it is known that the male relatives of the lady were here looking for Taylor on the day he left. He is a married man and his departure, under the circumstances, has created quite a sensation.

FIGHTING HARD

The Central's Directors Insist That the Lease Was Valid.

THEY OPPOSE A RECEIVERSHIP.

General Alexander Makes an Interesting Statement.

SPEYER & CO,'S LOAN EXPLAINED,

The Lawyers Have Not Finished the Arguments in the Case - The Result Uncertain.

The proceedings at Macon in the Central receivership case are watched with the leepest interest here in Atlanta.

While the amount of Central securities held in this city is not near so large as the holdings in other sections of Georgia, the railroad's future excites the greatest apprehension in traffic and financial circles. As mentioned heretofore in The Constitution, the opinion of lawyers and financial men is unanimous on the point that there is no ground for the appointment of a re-

"The Central is not insolvent, and there is no excuse for appointing a permanent re-ceiver," said one of Atlanta's leading lawyers yesterday. "The property should be restored to its directors, and run as an independent system. It will be the greatest calamity to the state since Sherman's raid, if the Central is turned over to a receiver. Millions of invested capital will be paralyzed, and the whole state will be given a terrible blow, if a permanent receiver is appointed. But, certainly, the court will not take such a step." Yesterday's proceedings developed the fact that the Central has flatly refused to pay the claim made by the Danville.

The argument will be continued today by the lawyers, and they may have to go back on Monday to finish. A decision is not expected until some time next week, and it may not be rendered for several days. The Argument at Macon

Macon, Ga., March 25 .- (Special.)-Dan Rountree resumed his argument in the Central receivership case when court convened at 10 o'clock this morning He spoke about one hour today. Mr. Rountree began his argument on the validity of the lease, dividing the subject as follows: That it was ultra vires, or beyond the authority of the directors. 2. That it was void because contrary to public policy. 3. That it was void because contrary to the consti-

Mr. Rountree was followed by Henry

Cunningham, of Savannah, counsel for the Central. Mr. Cunningham spoke until 3 o'clock this afternoon, when court adjourned until tomorrow morning. Mr. Cunningham relied largely upon the ninety-fourth equity rule. Mr. Lawson, who is Mr. Cunningham's partner, read an affidavit of General E. P. Alexander's with reference to the making of the lease of the Central Railroad and Banking Company. General Alexander said: "I agreed with Mr. Greene, of the lessee company, that an inventory of the company should be made by the officers of the company in whom I had confidence. The inventory was made and covered nearly four hundred pages.

and covered nearly four hundred pages. and covered nearly four hundred pages. After it was finished, it was sent to me for verification and acceptance. I found it substantially correct, but have not yet accepted it, waiting for the lessee to examine more fully and carefully than I have been able to do. While no formal inventory was taken, the amounts are shown on the aget's ledger. The balance sheet of the company and the inventory that was taken appear to show that the lessee company received over eight hundred thousand dollars in supplies, etc., and I was shown that the company had paid out over eight hundred thousand dollars. I have called attention to article sixteen of the lease, by which the company was bound to pay all of the amounts mentioned therein. The roads of the lessee company were unwilling to admit of the incorporation of article sixteen, amounting to about seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, unless I would give them securities upon which they could borrow money, but this I refused, but finally a proposition was accepted by which 493 shares of New England and Savannah Steamship Company stock was placed in escrow to wait a settlement. I returned to Savannah and sent an officer to Atlanta to have the question settled. As soon as I received his staronent, I went to New York with a comnittee to meet a committee of the lessee company. The lessee company's committee claimed they had been unable to make a settlement. We had a meeting of the committee, at which I submitted that under the terms of the lease. the claim was unfounded, and they agreed to release the steamship stock. Demanded Two Hundred Thousand Dollars

"I fully agreed to this action, but they then provided that I should turn over to $200,000 of Mobile and Girard bonds. I replied to this proviso that our bank had a claim for an equal amount for an advance to them. I refused to relieve the securities in escrow. The reason why I have not pressed the matter to a final con clusion is because I have been daily and weekly expecting another change in the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company. The management came into the office on last Friday, and I have been actively engaged in correspondence with them. Re-ferring to the nanuscript purporting to have been submitted to the committee of the general assembly of the state of Geor-gia, I found it very full of gross errors. The report o. my testimony therein is very long and I am unable to make it accurate as to the matter of decrease in the business of the Central. I know, personally, of strenuous efforts made this year by Richmond and Danville to secure freight and I have known them to charter a steamship to secure cotton."

Marion Erwin, of Macon, will com the argument in the morning. He will be followed by A. R. Lawton, Jr., of Savannah, and A. O. Bacon will close the argu-

TERMINAL'S SECURITIES TUMBLE.

The Plan to Reorganize the Properties Is New York, March 25.—(Special.)—There is no sense in trying to disguise the fact that the Terminal plan is thus far by no meens "a howling success. trary, to tell the truth, it is to all appear a dead flat failure ance a dead flat failure.

This appearance may be altogether to the liking of the sponsors. In other words they may be chuckling over the decided depression in the value of all securities involved in the plan because of the chance thereby to scoon them in at low prices for their individual lenefit. But the fact remains all the same that the public declines to endorse the programme and if it is successfully carried through it will have to be done by the inherent financial strength of the people who have fathered it.

A rumor was et in circulation late la tevening to the effect that Mr. Olcott has become disgusted and was determined to resign as chairman of the committee and wash his hands of the whole business. A mild semi-official denial of this report was put out early this morning, but the street was fixed in the opinion that something was wrong and declined to be reassured by the denial. Accordingly all the Terminal securities have shrunk today and it appears that the insiders are left with the bag to that the insiders are left with the bag to hold. Terminal preferred stock is down four full points and the common stock and bonds have suffered relatively. Thomas and Inman Sympathize.

It has been whispered about today that General Thomas and John Inman had, ala sympathetic conference, det ned to turn the back of their hands mined to turn the back of their hands to the whole business. This story flew through the streets like smoke before a gale and found many ready believers. Pafore the reorganizers finish their work they wil most likely find that the practical elimination of Sam Tacmas, John inman and the Calboun brothers from the situation, was an expensive experiment. The whole matter tonight looks fully as unpromising of success as it did when the Norton committee was summarily disposed ton committee was summarily disposed. The committee's failure to have ready of. The committee's failure to have ready the Central Trust Company's receipts for the deposit of securities is proving a sirious hindrance to anything has substantial success to the plan. Some people are audacious enough to suggest that the First national bank party has for the first time "bitten off more than it can chew." One thing is worthy of note, John Inman was in, now he is out, and every security of the Richmond Terminal system is lower than the day he resigned.

Work is progressing on the Carrabella railroad and there is a prospect that it will get into Tallahassee without much further delay. Carrabella is on the gulf coast, east of Apalachicola, and is a fine fishing point. It is proposed to extend this line from Tallahassee north to Thomasville and on to Tifton, the junction of the Brunswick and Western and the Georgia Southern and Florida. A line is being built westward from Sparks in Berrien county, and it is suggested that the line should be continued through Moultrie to some point in Mitchell county, say Pelham or Camilla, on the Albany branch of the Savannah, Florida and Western. the exception of Mr. Blount, all the Georgia congressmen will be candidates for re-election.

There might be third party opposition to a few of them but they are not apacyed about that. They look upon it in about the same light they do republican opposition. Not-withstanding the great amount of blowing that is being indulged in by a few self-constituted leaders of what they designate the people's party in Georgia, congress believe these men have a following sufficiently large to count.

From the fifth all kinds of news comes. There is a large element in the district opposed to Colonel Livingston, but this same element fought him before with as much vigor s they can muster again. Colonel Livingston has done good work here. He has demnot hesitate to ask for what he wants. In New Mexico consumption is responsible for but 3 per cent. What I want is to have the governmen cede certain lands upon which private enterprise may erect a sanitarium. This institution should be located in one of the territories—whichever may be the more healthful-and the commission is to decide the matter. The cession for this purpose could not be regarded as extraordinary. If the government can set apart such a reservation as the Yellowstone park for public pleasure then it can cede a reservation which would have a most beneficial effect on the public health. We gener-ally recognize consumption as hereditary, but it is really a question as to whether it is not also contagious. I hope to advocate the proposition in the senate and think I shall be able to show how

HE SHOT THE PORTER

His Fare.
Columbus, Ga., March 25.—(Special.)—
On the arrival of the steamer Apalachee here Captain Moore told a thrilling story of a tragedy that occurred on his boat during her last trip. Captain Moore was seen by a reporter for The Enquirer-Sun, and his story is as follows:

Just before the Apalachee left her dock at Apalachicola a well-dressed negro came on board and asked the clerk for a cabin passage to Columbus. On the upper deck of the boat and above the state rooms reserved for the white passengers are situ-ated a number of small cabins, which are hired to colored people who wish to travel on first-class tickets. The late arrival looked like a quiet, well-behaved man and the clerk, without hesitation, assigned him to a room and handed him the key.

After the steamer had started on her journey and had reached a point several miles up the river the clerk remembered the miles up the river the clerk remembered the well-dressed negro, and sent a porter up to the room to tell him to come down and pay his fare. In a few minutes the porter came back and informed the clerk that the passenger not only refused to pay, but had cursed him in the most violent manner for daring to ask him for money. The clerk ordered the porter to return once more and tell the man if he did not come down immediately and settle he would be sent for and then he would be in serious trouble. The porter went off on his errand and a moment later the loud report of a pistol startled everybody on the boat. Captain Sommercamp and several of his officers immediately rushed to the upper cabin and there they found the passenger standing over the body of the porter with a smoking pistol in his hand. Captain Sommercamp struck the weapon from the man's hand pistol in his hand. Captain Sommercamp struck the weapon from the man's hand before he could do any more damage, and while he cursed everybody near him he was tied and locked up in a room with iron bars to the window.

As soon as the desperate man had been disarmed, the attention of the officers of the boat was turned to the porter, who was still groaning on the floor. When he had been laid in a bed it was found that his clothes were burned and a wound was found in the center of the abdomen. A closer investigation showed that the wound was only a slight one, and that the ball was located just underneath the skin. When the porter was convinced that he was not about to die, he explained that when he returned to the passenger's room with the clerk's message, he found him seated on a chair with a pistol in his hand, and before he had time to say a word the man leaned forward, placed his pistol against his stomach and fired. Fortunately for the porter the muzzle rested against a button, and this saved his life.

When the steamer reached Bluntstown the dangerous passenger was sent ashore to the jail, and a charge of attempted murder was made against him. Farther up the river Captain Sommercamp was surprised and disgusted to hear that the justice of the peace, before whom the man was aken for commitment, had turned him loose.

The company had no idea, however, of allowing so dangerous a criminal to go unpunished, and telegrams were immediately sent to all points, giving a description of the man and asking for his arrest.

A few days ago Captain Moore received word that the man had been captured, and when the Fannie Fern went down the river on her last trip the man was taken on board and final's locked up in the Apalachicola jail, where he was fully committed to await the action of the grand jury, which meets on the 4th of next month.

San Antonio, Tex., March 25.-General Marino Escabedo, the greatest of the living Mexican generals, who was commande chief of the national army during the French invasion and during Maximilan's short and stormy reign, arrived here this morning. He is now living in retirement on his hacienda in Guanajuata, Mexico. It has been charged and so stated in his story, that the fall of Queretaro was due to treachery on the part of Miguel Lopez, of Maximilian's staff, who was generally supposed to have delivered up the strong place for a traitor's reward. In an interview with your correspondent today General Escabedo cleared up that error. He been sealed by a promise which I held safe, but the discovery of authentic letters from Maximilian has revealed the truth, through no agency of mine, and released me accidentally from the pledge I had taken as the last favor on earth to a doomed prince. Miguel Lopez was a serret emissary of Maximilian. He was sent to me at the dead of night and in the deepest secrecy to propose, in Maximilian's name, the surrender of Queretaro, providing he, the emperor, was allowed to flee the country in safety. This I could not and would not grant, and demanded an unconditional surrender. Miguel Lopez then told me. in Maximilian's name, that the surrender of Queretaro would be made on the morrow, but asked me, in Maximilian's name, and as a last and single favor to the fated prince, never to reveal the proposition made by Maximilian to surrender his army in exchange for his freedom, and to thus save his name from the inif his treasonable intent were known to the world. This is how it channed that Colonel Lopez has borne in silence many years the brand of infamy as the last act of heroic devotion to the memory of Maxience to the case of Colonel Nieves Hernandez, who is now in prison at the capital unmartial at Monterey, before which he was tried, on the charge of aiding Garza in his revolutionary movement. General Esca-bedo said that he did not believe that the sentence would be confirmed by the supreme military court to which the case had been appealed. In any event, Hernandez would be pardoned by President Diaz. General Escabedo entertained no doubt of Diaz's re-election, saying the people were much more engrossed in the material development of the country than in following the idency.

Speaking of the proposed return of the flags captured by the American army in Mexico, the general dismissed the subject by recalling that the Mexicans still had some cannons and flags captured from the Americans. He didn't know but what an exchange of trophies would be fair. exchange of trophies would be fair.

WATERS THAT HEAL.

Shattered Nerves Are Made New and Strong Again.

WONDERFUL TONIO PROPERTIES.

Buffalo Lithia Springs Is a Paradise for Broken-Down and Diseased Humanity.

Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va., March 25. -(Special Correspondence.)-Since reaching Buffalo Lithia Scrings, I have come to the conclusion that southern people who leave their homes in summer, seeking rest and recreation, should inaugurate a reform. Those who have enough money do so, generally seek the ultra-fashionable resorts, where there is continual whirl of dissipation.

doing this, they simply abandon for a period a mil! form of social carousal for a species that is more excessive and exacting on the constitution. The result is, they return home rired and jaded, and more debilitated than when they left. If disease was lodged in their systems, it remains there, and the allotment of their days on earth, as a matter of legitimate conse quence, is abbreviated.

If people want to rest and recover the lost motion incident to worry and hard work, they ought to go where rest can be found, and the remedial agencies of water, climate and surroundings will repair the wastes of vitality and regenerate muscle

This sounds like jargon from the doctor hop, but it isn't. It is simply the diagnosis shop, but it isn't. It is simply the diagnosis of a layman, which has materialized from drinking Buffalo Lithia water two days. One glass of the water will choke off the worst attack of indigestion in the world, and a half a dozen glasses will make you feel like you will never be troubled with such a complaint again. The water is so odorless and tasteless that the uninitiated would never imagine on drinking it that it is charged with mineral properties, but the mistake is soon revealed by the effect. The head almost imm diately seems to shake off the weight of a ton, and when you lay down at night, no matter how hard the bed is, you are asleep in five minutes. On awaker ing in the morning, there is no red on the whites of your eyes and you feel as though ou have gotten every grain of rest and refreshment that nature intended should be in one night's sleep. You kick out your legs and they are so aglie that you want to bounce up and run a half-mile dash with the fellow that is feeling just like you, on the other bed. But there is an over-ruling sensation that reaches a climax of aggression when the tinkling of a bell is heard from the regions below. Then it occurs to you to put all of your energy in a movement towards the breakfast table. You heretofore fickle appetite seems to take pos-session of the entire situation, and chicken, eggs, ham, breakfast bacon and coffee disappear in turn, while the penalty of indi-gestion never once dares to threaten.

While each of these waters has proved of special value in accordance with its con-stituent parts, yet other results have fol-lowed the use of the water which are not explainable when the therapeutic effects of their ingredients are taken into considera-tion. Commenting on this fact, Dr. Hunter McGuire, formerly professor of surgery in the Virginia Medical college, says: "What whatever may be the published analysis of Spring No. 2, I know from the constant use of it personally, and in my practice during many years past, that the results obtained from its use are far beyond those which would be warranted from the analysis of the state of sis given. I am of opinion that it either contains some powerful remedial agent, as yet undiscovered by medical science, or its elements are so delicately combined in nature's laboratory, that they defy the utmos skill of the chemist to solve the secret of skill of the chemist to solve the secret of their power."

It would be almost impossible to consider these springs distinctively, as their chemicophysiological action on the human body is so intimately related. However, spring No. 1 is antacid and diuretic, but less so than spring No. 2, and, as a general rule, is used in cases in which tonics and alteratives are indicated. It possesses the latter qualities in common with and in equal degree to No. 2. Speaking of No. 1, in this particular, Dr. James Shelton, for twenty-seven years a resident at the springs, says that this water has a wide adaptation as a therapeutic agent in the long category of that this water has a wide adaptation as a therapeutic agent in the long category of diseases which may be grouped under the generic term, derangements of the nervous system. Under this head, its power as an aphrodisiac has also been thoroughly demonstrated by relieving sterility in wo-men and impotence in men.

demonstrated by relieving sterility in women and impotence in men.

The miraculous efficacy of these waters as a nervous tonic seems to have the almost unanimous endorsement of the medical profession, and the springs are a great resort for lawyers, students, ministers and others enfeebled and broken down from over-mental effort. The properties exerted in this direction also act as an antidote for the thirst for stimulants. People in the neighborhood and those whom I have met at the springs tell me that parties under the influence of the waters, have as a general rule, no desire for liquor. Therefore no such thing is kept about the place.

Dr. E. C. Laird, the resident physician, referring to the alcoholic habit in this connection, says:

"Statistics prove that it is the in-door workman who is oftenest the victim of the alcohol habit."

"Deprived of fresh air, sunshine and in many cases physical exercise also, the enmany cases physical exercise also, the en-tire organism suffers to a greater or less degree, and nature craves some remedy to restore the lost vital forces.

"Alcohol brings the desired relief tempo-rarily, but day after day larger quantities are required to accomplish the result, and before the victim is aware of the danger the habit is formed.

"The peculiar pervey toxic respective.

habit is formed.

"The peculiar nerve tonic properties of the Buffalo Lithia water, both springs No. 1 and 2, meet the requirements of those people for a tonic and stimulant, and this relieves the thirst for alcoholic drinks. I regard spring No. 1 as the most potent of the two waters in these cases, and I am not alone in ascribing this peculiar nerve tome power to them, for it has been noted and attention publicly called to it by Dr.

Hunter McGuire, Dr. William A. Hammond, Dr. John L. Cabel, Dr. G. Hulstead Boyland, Dr. Harvey L. Bird and other eminent physicians. And as confirmatory of the above views it is constantly remarked by visitors at the springs, who are in the habit of using wines and liquors, that they 'have no desire whatever for them while under the influence of the waters."

Madison, Ga., March 25 .- (Special.)-Peter Patrick is the name of an old darky, living near Rutledge, who is somewhat of curiosity. He is about sixty-five years old and weighs about one hundred and twenty five pounds. The strange thing about this old man is his resemblance to a sheep. His color is perfectly black, the hair of his head long and white, as also is his beard. It ooks exactly like a white sheep's wool. He tells us that this wool is as long and thick on his back and shoulders as it is on his face and head. Also that it covers his entire body. He has a very peculiar appearance about the face. He tells us he is a dear lover of sheep, and oftentimes during his life he has spent the nights under the old ginhouse and in the screwpit. He is a negro of good sense, and one of the most industrious old men we ever saw. He does not deny that he is like unto a sheep, and will talk freely on the subject. Also says that he had a heavy coat of beard when he was only twelve years old, and it was perectly white when it made its appearance.

THE PRISONERS GO FREE. Six Inmates of Haralson County Jail Make Their Escape.

Carrollton, Ga., March 25 .- (Special.)-Carroliton, Ga., March 25.—(Special.)— Buchanan, Haralson county, had a jail de-livery this morning about 1 o'clock, and six prisoners, two whites and four negroes, escaped. Sheriff William Johnson, who is the jailer, was out of town a few miles waiting on the family of a sick friend, when the jailbirds flew. John Batton, a white man, who was in jail, accused of stealing clothing of David Hass, of Tallapoosa, and says he has broken out of a dozen different jails, planned the escape. The jail is brick and ceiled inside, and part of the ceiling was pried off and a hole made through the brick wall. The prison-ers let themselves down by means of bed-iner. ding. Two who were so large that they couldn't get out at the hole, remained, and say they didn't want to escape, for they were guilty of nothing wrong. They say they would have reported the matter, but Batton threatened them with death.

Summerville, Ga., March 25.—(Special.)—

Mr. J. J. Hall is displaying samples of English walnuts grown on his place in east Dougherty, near the Worth county line, These walnuts compare favorably, both in size and quality, with any that we have ever seen, and Mr. Hall has certainly demonstrated the fact that English walnuts can be averaged. walnuts can be successfully grown in southwest Georgia. The trees from which the samples before us were taken are seven years old, and they are now in full bearing. Mr. Hall ordered the young full bearing. Mr. Hall ordered the young trees from a nursery, and says that they commenced to bear in five years. In addition to the trees now bearing Mr. Hall has quite a number of younger ones that came from the first crop of nuts that he made. He says that the trees seem to grow much better from the seed, and that he would advise those who want to grow walnuts to plant the nuts instead of ordering trees. Mr. Hall's experiment with English walnuts offers a suggestion ordering trees. Mr. Hall's experiment with English walnuts offers a suzgestion to the land owners of southwest Georgia which they should act upon at once. An acre of English walnuts in full bearing would be valuable.

Terrible Death of an Infant.

Columbus, Ga., March 25. — (Special.)—This afternoon the eighteen-months-old child of James Wood was killed in a terrible manner. The little one was playing in the floor at the feet of her mother, and in some way got hold of a pair of scissors. Suddenly the child gave a scream, and it was found she had fallen on the sharp point of one blade, which penetrated the skull and inflicted a wound from which she died in a few hours. she died in a few hours.

The Heavy Rains in Columbus

The Heavy Rains in Columbus.

Columbus, Ga., March 25.—(Special.)—
The city has been visited this week with the heaviest and most continuous rain in several years. The rain set in Wednesday morning and has continued without interruption. Numerous cellars on Broad street and in other portions of the city were flooded today. The river is on a boom, and rising rapidly. This afternoon, all the cotton mills had to shut down, as there was danger of flooling the lower floors, and the operatives will be idle several days. This is a serious thing to the factory hands. The rainfall has been simply immense and there are apprehensions of washouts.

A COMANCHE STORY.

Dared to His Death, a Brave Shows the

From The National Tribune. A story told to many of us during the cam paign referred to, by one of the oldest of the Camanches, the oldest Indian I have ever seen, "Little Beaver," of the Osages, is very interesting, showing to what an art the de-spised savage of thirty years ago reduced story-telling. The dried-up old warrior prefaced his tale by stating that he was so aged "that he was brother of the highest peak of the Wichita mountains," at the foot of which we were camped on a cold December night in 1868. Here is the story:
So many years ago that it seemed like a fream even to the narrator, the Comanche vere the greatest tribe on earth. There riors were as numerous as a herd of buffalo on the Arkansas in the fall. They were more cunning than the cayote. Their herd of conles contained so many animals—all fine and fat-that no man could count them in a year. All the other Indians of the plains and mountains feared and trembled at the name of Comanche. In the tribe, as is ever the case, there were two warriors who excelled all the others in their prowess. One was young and the other middle-aged. They were very jealous of each other, each constantly attempting some deed of daring at which, it was hoped, the rival would balk. One fall, when the Indian sum-mer made the air redolent with the sweet perfume of thousands of flowers and the mountains were bathed in the amber mist of that delicious season, all the great warriors were returning from one of their most famous were returning from one of their most throng victories.

They camped under the shadow of Medicine Binff late one afternoon, when the young brave, who was quietly smoking his pipe as he hovered over the little campfire on which he was boiling a piece of antelope steak, happened to fix his gaze on the highest point of the bluff, and in that position continued for several minutes wrapped in a most profound study, while all the rest of the band stopped whatever they were doing and gazed topped whatever they were doing and gazed stopped whatever they were doing and gazed at him as intently.

Suddenly he rose to his full height, and casting a defiant look upon the warriors scattered around on the grass who, excited at his strange manner, sprang up to learn what he meant. Presently he turned his face toward the sun, which was about two hours high, and broke out with this boast:

"No warrior equals me! I am the greatest of all the Comanches! I resemble that mountain!" pointing with his spear to the highest peak of Medicine Bluff. "My actions are as far above yours as that mountain is above the stream at its foot! Is there a warrior here who dare follow me?"

the stream at follow me?"

Then he shook his spear and brandished his shield in defiance of any and all. His rival snied in denance of any and all. His rival was all the time swelling with rage and pride. He knew the boast was intended for him alone, although he was the elder of the two. He approached the braggart with all the dignity of the savage that he was, and strik-ing himself on the bosom several times, ex-claimed:

"So! You are the greatest warr (lomanches? You are the buffalo that leads the herd? I am the old buil to be driven away by the cowardly coyote and die, leaving my bones to whiten? You ask me to follow you. Never! I never follow! I will go with you?"

The remainder of the band gathered around the two celebrated warriors. They wondered what new deed of daring they were going to attempt, as the rivals arrayed themselves in their best buckskin dress and mounted their favorite ponies. With shields held in a defy-ing position, their faces painted and their bonnets of war-eagle feathers flowing in the breeze they rode away without another word. They forded the stream. The youngest now started up the difficult trail, which led to the started up the discline Bluff, where, sacred summit of the Medicine Bluff, where, stopping his affrighted steed, he pointed to the fearful precipice a few rods off and exclaimed: "You have followed me here;

They shouting the war-whoop, which made the echoes of the mountain awaken, and thumping the flanks of his animal vigorously, he darted toward the awful brink. His rival instantly raised his pony on his hind less and with a whoop more piercing followed the young man, who when he had reached the edge of the precipice failed in courage and pulled his pony violently back on his haunches. The elder saw his chance. With on awful yell of defiance and triumph he forced his horse to make the terrible leap in mid-air All the warriors on the grassy bottom below watched with eager interest what going on above them. They heard the whoop of the aged warrior as he jumped down the awful abyss. They saw him sit as calmly as if in his "lodge" as he descended, seated as upright on his pony as if his animal were walking the prairie, and, above all, they heard his clear voice as it rung out in the "Greater than all the Comanches." douds: Sadly they wended their way to the foot of the bluff, where both horse and brave rider lay a mangled mass on the rocks, the old warrior with a smile on his wrinkled face of unmistakable triumph.

The boasting rival became a wanderer ong the tribes. His name was accursed of all Indians. The very dogs of the camps snapped at him as he passed. At last, overcome with remorse at his cowardice and treachery, he killed himself. One day he was ound dead on the grave of his rival at the oot of the bluff. His body was eaten by coyotes; his shield and spear, by which he had been identified, were lying on the ground

Gets a Frenchman Into Trouble-His Case G. H. Mouton, an alleged physician, was Yesterday afternoon a warrant was him with forgery. Dr. J. R. Gregory, the druggist on Peachtree street, is the plain-

Mouton is a young Frenchman, who came to Atlanta about a month ago. He claimed New Orleans as his home, and stated that the Crescent City had been the scene of great reverses in his life.

His appearance fully substantiated the statement that he had experienced reverses. He had the air and look of one who was entirely indifferent to personal attire. He hung around drug stores mainly, but his shabbiness, naturally, did not win for him anything like a ready confidence. The Frenchman, during his residence here, claimed to be a practicing physician, with a regular office. Beyond his own pretentions, nothing was known of him. He was addicted to the morphine habit, and that seems to be responsible for his present trouble.

Mouton bought the drug at Dr. Gregory's. At first he paid for it, but, about two weeks ago, he managed to obtain credit. His bill ran up to nearly four dollars, and, on Thursday, a week ago, he presented a check in payment for it. The check amounted to $7.50, and the name of Mr. Samuel Weil, the lawyer, was attached to it. The indebtedness was deducted, and Mouton was given credit for the balance.

The check was not deposited in bank until Thursday. Later in the day it was returned to Dr. Gregory, dishonored. The signature had been forged. An effort was then made to find the erring Frenchman. Yesterday morning he was turned over to the police.

Mouton will be taken before Justice Man-He spent last night in a cell, and move about in it very restlessly. He was in the condition in which victims of the morphine habit are always found, and continually injected the drug into his arm.

An experiment was to have been made

An experiment was to house, by a well-apon him, at the station house, by a wellthom specialist, but it was postponed until this morning, when an effort will be made to cure him of the fearful practice. Mouton is a widower, and claims to have lost his family several years ago. They went to Cuba, he says, on a tour of pleasure, and were there sricken with yellow fever. In a few weeks his wife, daughter and sons had died from it. From that time, he states, he has rapidly fallen, financially and socially. Cheating the Gallows. Cincinnati, March 25.—A Mount Gilead O., dispatch says that when Ren Gano was Raleigh, N. He states that this large excess in expenditures over receipts is due to the want of railroad work, and the extraordinary expenses of equipping and building quarters and other necessary buildings for two large farms working over one hundred horses. · Frost Warnings in Large Demand--- No Damage Yet.

LETTERS TO THE WEATHER DIRECTOR.

The Constitution's Article on Saving the Fru Moves the Growers to Take Prompt Action.

There will be plenty of fruit after all, if it is not destroyed by severe weather here-Reports from the important fruit-grow ing districts agree in this statement, and from the preparations now being made to protect the trees against frost, the probability is that we will have a good crop. The Constitution's article on saving the fruit by frost warnings and slow fires has stirred up the fruit growers all along the line, and by the first mail they made requisition on Director Morrill, of the state weather bureau, for the frost warnings he offered to send out for the benefit of fruit

The following letters received by Mr. Morrill convey the gratifying information that fruit was not seriously injured by the recent freeze and they also show how prompt the growers are to take advantage of the facilities offered by the weather bureau through The Constitution.

Marshallville, Ga., March 23, 1892.—Dear Sir: I notice in today's Constitution that for the next thirty days you will send out frost warrings to fruit-growers, etc. As this place is the center of one of the largest fruitgrowirs sections in the state, with 1,000 acres or more in orchards, we are anxious to have your signal notices, etc. Telegraph to me here as postmaster and I will bulletin it. Let me hear from you and greatly oblige,
Y. V. FREDERICK, P. M.

"Put Us on Your List."

"Put Us on Your List."

Forsyth, Ga., March 23, 1892.—Director Weather Bureau, Atlanta. Dear Sir: Will you kindly put our city, Forsyth, on your list of weather stations for the next thirty days. The f vit business has gotten to be quite an item with our people, and hence the necessity of out being apprized of the approaching danger by frost, etc. Hoping you will give our city a favorable consideration. I am yours truly A M BRAMELETT Mayor. A. M. BRAMBLETT, Mayor.

Two from Fort Valley.

Fort Valley, Ga., March 23, 1892.— Dear Sir: I notice in today's Constitution an article about protecting fruit against frost by means of smoking and smudging, and the ficea strikes me as a very plausible one. If the will be kind enough to place us on the list ard send the frost warnings to me, I will use every precaution to circulate them with the growers in and around this point. We have here about 2,000 acres in fruit and a fine prospect for a crop. Yours truly, O. M. HOUSER.

Fort Valley, Ga., March 23, 1892.—Mr. Park Morrill. Dear Sir: If you will be kind chough to send me the frost warnings I will take great pleasure in giving fruit-growers the warnings. In 1889 we shipped from this point rearly one hundred cars of peaches. All fruit-growers in and around Fort Valley are p xious that their crop should be saved and you may rest assured that I am deeply interested in the success of the fruit crop in our section this season, as it means much for our people I shall refer them to the article in today's Constitution and will tell them that I have asked you for warnings Hoping you will be able to do this. I am your obedient servant.

From the Le Conte Nursery.

Smithville, Ga., March 23, 1892.—Mr. Park Morrill. Dear Sir: The fruit-growers here wish you to establish a signal of cold waves at this polyt. There are 200 acres here in fruit within three miles. I have seventy-five acres in fruit myself. The cold of the 19th did not hart us much. There is plenty left on the trees for best developments. Yours truly.

W. W. THOMPSON.

The Weather Chief Endorses the Plan. Director Morrill, of the Georgia weather service, is much pleased at the promptness with which the fruit growers are seizing the opportunity to use the weather service to their advantage. He has had a letter from the chief of the weather bureau, Dr. Mark Harrington, approving the plan to save fruit in Georgia and authorizing him to send out frost warnings by telegraph to fruit growers at fifty stations, which may be reached by Western Union wires. Chief Harrington adds the following

"It is very desirable that signals shall be displayed in order to give the widest publicity to the warnings, and with this end in view, the property official has been requested to send you fifty frost-warning flags for distribution to the points selected. With these facilities there is no reason why anybody but a lazy man should lose his fruit crop this year.

About the Smudges.

For the convenience of those who may not have seen the article in The Constitution of the 23d, it is repeated here that the whole wheat crop of the Red river valley of Minnesota was saved from frost last ley of Minnesota was saved from frost last August at a time when the grain was in the dough and would have been greatly damaged, but for the frost warnings and the use of the smudge system. A "smudge" is a slow fire, made by putting combustible material under several wagon loads of damp straw or green pine tops. Four of these to a hundred acres will keep a veil of several content and provide acres when the trace and provide acres to a few several ways. of smoke over the trees and operate as clouds do to prevent frost. The cloud of smoke reflects back to the earth the heat lost by radiation, and so raises the temperature among the trees. The heat of the fires also contributes to the same end. It was found that smudges and log fires saved orange groves and vegetables in Florida. when the temperature did not go below 26 degrees. It is practiced with great success by truck farmers in that state.

The Silver Bill in the House, eet made a very stormy fight on age bill in the house Thursrough practices which its agents in, it came very near carrying The goldbugs, although they narrow margin, to lay the able, prevented its passage, again through the action of the commitee on rules.

Wall street boasts that Harrison will veto the bill, but its strenuous efforts to defeat the measure in the house shows that it is not so certain of the veto. As a matter of fact, Harrison would be terribly embarrassed by the bill, and Wall street is afraid to trust him. The duty of the democrats under the circumstances is plain. They should press the bill to its passage through both branches of congress, and take advantage of the split which a veto would bring about in the republican party.

The democrats cannot afford, at this time, when the third party missionaries are at work, to permit the policy of the party to be dictated by eastern men who contribute nothing whatever to the party's success.

Make a Note of This.

The work of democratic organization in the state is going briskly on. The county executive committees are being called together, and announcements of democratic mass meetings are being

Democratic action in the state has been somewhat delayed, but it comes in good time now, and the interest manifested in organization for the campaign is encouraging. Every county in the state seems to be on its mettle alert and watchful, and the determined forces are forming in battle array. There is need for great activity-for strong and united effort, among all democrats who have the welfare of the state at heart, and they seem to realize this, and are striving for success. Every call for a democratic meeting has a spirited ring in it: The people are awake! We advise the farmers of Georgia to keep these democratic meetings in sight -to attend them; to take part in their business; to keep themselves well posted on the subject of the work in hand; to eason together in the democratic ranks, with the interests of the state in view. and weigh well those interests when they are tempted to follow after strange

The farmers of many counties are moving spirits in these democratic meetings. The few who may have been led astray, or may have become indifferent, should fall in line, and, standing on the platform of the party, hear what it has to say to the people and give heed to its counsels.

More Campaign Thunder. Bluster and sham in London, and sham n Washington.

Big talk from Salisbury, and bigger talk from Harrison-on both sides windy determination and defiance, and, under it all, sneaking apprehension, whimpered out in the shape of mutual professions of regard as hollow and yet as pretty as a Mexican proclamation.

This is the present attitude of Engand and America over the Behring sea business. The tories admire Salisbury's nerve, and the republicans applaud Harrison's firmness. But this talk is mere campaign thunder. It is intended to capture votes in the two countries and nothing more.

Still, it is always possible that differences between nations may result in war. In the present case such an unexpected termination would be a good thing for this country in the long run. At first the British navy would have the best of it, but at the end of a year the result would be in our favor, and Canada and the British possessions in the West Indies would be under our flag. The struggle would reunite the sections, make our industries profitable, inflate the currency thing, because it sacrifices human life This is true, but so is peace a terrible thing, when the masses suffer, and helpless women and children go down to early graves in want and misery under plutocratic oppression. In war strong men fight and die; in the Shylock's shameful peace weak women and babes are among the victims.

War, however, is not sought. The tories and the republicans dread war because it brings to the front a new crop of heroes to supplant them in office. So they will boast and threaten and get what glory they can out of a warfare of words.

The powers that be in England and America are not anxious to put each other down; what they want to do is to to put their own people down and keep them down for the benefit of a few privileged classes.

Boodlers Everywhere.

If the pessimists of our day wish to point to an era of corruption, they need not go back to the old Tweed regime in New York for an illustration. They have only to look around them and take their text from the current news of the day.

About a year ago the Philadelphia frauds, in connection with the rotten Keystone bank, startled the nation. Some of the guilty persons were punished, and others escaped with smirched reputa-

But punishment does not check the evil. The legislature of New Jersey, if we are to believe The New York Herald, is controlled by a syndicate having a corruption fund of $3,000,000. This syndicate, according to The Herald, offered a senator $25,000 for his vote legalizing the Reading coal combine.

Down in Arkansas we find the third party making capital out of the fact that the state treasury was looted two or three years ago.

It is just as bad in cities. Chicago has indicted a crowd of aldermen, and the investigation has brought to light the systematic bribery of officials. Denver is after a gang of boodlers; San Francisco's last grand jury started a similar investigation; Omaha is preparing to follow. suit, and New York is charged by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst with open and flagrant corruption in official circles.

All over the land, regardless of sectional and party lines, there is a taint of boodlerism in the air. Corruption invades every circle, and distrust is so general that the solid citizens who go on the bond of a saintly friend one day, feel that they run the risk of seeing him in the prisoner's dock the next.

All this is the result of the plutocratic poison now permeating our entire social system. Big fortunes have rapidly multiplied; the style of living has been revolutionized, and millions of our people who have been educated to enjoy and desire luxury find that the only way to obtain it suddenly and easily is through dishonest methods. Most of the men who vield to this temptation are the graduates of our present system of education which eliminates all parental restraint, and runs children through a state machine, godless, irresponsible and dominated by the progressive craze in its most material aspect.

Reform is impossible until the nation reforms its social, educational and political system. Investigation and the occasional infliction of punishment will not restore the old-time honesty. The plain people must restore the plain ways of living of the good old days if they would get rid of corruption. Boodlers come from the people; get the people all right and there will be no boodlers, for plu tocracy, the main cause of boodlerism cannot exist when a virtuous people control the government!

"Something Wrong."

The St. Louis Christian Advocate says: A New York paper publishes the names of early a hundred men and women in that city who are worth ten millions or more. Mr John D. Rockefeller heads the list with $125, 900,000, and after him come W. W. Astor with $120.000,000, Russell Sage with $90,000,00 and Jay Gould with $60,000,000. years ago Rockefeller was a clerk in an of store, at a salary of $25 a month. There is something wrong in the conditions of social ife when one man can heap up $125,000,000 in less than a quarter of a century. Now, this is just what millions of people are saying all over the country. The goldbugs of the east denounce such talk as socialistic, and say that it encourage anarchy. Perhaps so, but the masse cannot afford to submit quietly to con ditions under which one man can make $125,000,000 in twenty-five years. They cannot keep their heads out of the slough of poverty if this drift of great fortunes into the hands of a few men in the east is to continue. It is estimated now that 250,000 persons own more than one-half of the wealth of the country, and unless there is a change they or their successors will practically own it all in the course of another generation. As a matter of self-preservation the people are forced to combat this ruinous tendency of things, and the general demand for financial relief, tariff reform and a graduated income tax is assuming a shape that must be heeded.

The fact that the paragraph quoted at the beginning of this article appeared in a Methodist paper of large circulation shows how the popular feeling is beginning to make itself felt. When religious and law-abiding citizens raise this outcry against the growing evil of congested wealth in the hands of a small privileged class, they cannot be silenced by the impudent reply that they are socialists or agitators. The only way to meet these people is to propose a satisfactory remedy for their grievances.

By postponing the free coinage bill Wall treet would gain a double victory. It would suppress the issue in the coming and drive the southern farmers into the third party. Hill can carry New York on the silver

Here is an interesting question from The New York Examiner: "But who is a capital-ist? How much must a man be worth to belong to that class? The term greatly needs defining. Is a man worth $1,000 a capitalist, or $5,000, or $10,000, or $100,000, or $1,000, Where is the line to be drawn?

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Emory College on "Intercollegiate Sports." Emory College on "Intercollegiate Sports."
Oxford, Ga., March 22.—Editor Constitutions Several publications have appeared in your columns recently which misrepresent the position of Emory college on the subject of "Intercollegiate Sports," grieve our friends and injure the inof Emory college on the students and injure the institution.

Please allow me space, therefore, to say, that while Emory college encourages all wholesome sports among its students, it looks with no allowance upon what are called "intercollegiate sports," believing that such games involve hurtful absences from college, useless expense to students, excitements before and after a match game which are unfriendly to habits of study, more or less gambling and other immoralities, and in the end do not even promote healthful sports. The match games tend to give exercise to a few students, while they make mere spectators of the majority of the student body, thus defeating the ends of sport and bringing the perils I have indicated.

For these reasons, at their last annual session, the trustees of Emory college took the following action on the recommendation of a committee composed of the late Dr. W. H. Potter, Dr. Robert Battey, Rev. W. P. Pattillo and Captain John L. Day:

Battey, Rev. W. P. Pattillo and Captain John L. Day:

"In view of the demoralizing influence of match games upon the habits of students, and the strong tendency to gambling which such games foster, and believing them. in fact, to conflict with the best interests of the young men, however plausible the theory may be which favors them, be it

"Resolved, That the faculty is instructed not to permit the students of this college to engage in any match games of baseball or any other match game in which physical training and strength are the issues to be tried, with any other parties in any other place whatsoever."

This sort of thing reached its highest and best fruit among the Greeks centuries ago with what evil results the world knows. Northern institutions of learning have tried it until Puck says of their colleges: "They are institutions at which the young men play baseball and football, and a few who have lessure take the classics and mathematics."

Emory college will not follow, with the multitude, this evil fad.

What Is Honest Money? Editor Constitution-The discussion of free silver bill in congress has brought free silver bill in congress has brought out the question: What is honest money?

Mr. Rayner, of Maryland, one of the antifree coinage members of congress, thus defines honest money:

"I apprehend," said he, as he took a stand in the aisle near his seat, "that we are all in favor of honest money: that we are not in favor of a depreciated and fluctuated currency; that we want a measure of value that is certain and stable, and not one that is variable and changeable from day to day, and that has different values in the different localities in which if may be employed. An honest man, when he owes a dollar, is willing to pay a dollar, and when he gives a dollar's worth of labor or sells a dollar's worth of merchandise expects to receive a dollar in the above.

of a legal tender note, is sustained by the credit of the government, or by an equivalent amount of treasure in the government vault, then the caper dollar is an honest dollar. If it is in the shape of coin, and when melted in the crucible is worth a dollar, then it is also an honest dollar. If, however, the government has not the means or resources to redeem its paper 'nromises, or if the government stamps the mark of a dollar upon a piece of buillon that is not worth a dollar, then, in either event, we have a dishonest dollar. This is the difference between honest and dishonest money."

Then, according to Mr. Rayner's definition, all money is dishonest that does not have the promise of the government, together with the capacity of the same, to pay the holder on demand metallic money of the honest variety to the full amount of the note, if paper, and if metallic it is dishonest if it does not contain, in addition to the stamp of the government, a sufficient amount of metal to be worth a dollar as buillion at the commercial quotations at any time it may assume to be honest.

Now, if this rule is to be applied strictly, it onest.

Now, if this rule is to be applied strictly, it

Now, if this rule is to be applied strictly, it would seem to me to be very difficult to continue metallic money honest if the changes incident to supply and demand would permit its ever being made absolutely honest.

We will suppose, now, that the gold and silver dollar actually contains today a dollar's worth of metal at the bullion quotations of March 25, 1892. Are we sure that unless we have a dollar coined for the occasion that these conditions will exist a year, a month or even one single day? Bullion is a commercial commodity, and as liable to fluctuate in the market as other commodities. It is as susceptible to the effects of supply and demand as metals of any sort. Then how are we to continue Mr. Rayner's honest dollar? Evidently there is no way to accomplish it, only to have "honest" bulllom. If congress can enact a law that will prevent fluctuations in the bullion market, then the "honest" dollar is assured; otherwise it seems to be out of the question.

According to Mr. Rayner's definition, have we an "honest dollar" in existence?

Was there ever an "honest dollar" made in this country?

The gold and silver certificates are not hon-

this country?

The gold and silver certificates are not hon-The gold and silver certificates are not non-sist, because the government is only author-zed to pay an equal number of metallic dol-ars for them if presented to the United States treasurer, and those will very likely be dishonest dollars if builion should happen to be "on the rise."

The government bonds are not "honest," be-cause they are liable to be paid, principal and anterest. In "dishonest dollars." In any event, they fluctuate in the market, and hence are dishonest per sec.

event, they fluctuate in the market, and hence are dishonest per sec.

The national bank currency is "dishonest." because it is issued on the basis of a deposit of "dishonest" government bonds.

The greenbacks are not honest money, because they fluctuated greatly during the war, and are liable to do so again.

Some may say the greenbacks did not fluctuate in value, but that metallic money went to a very considerable premium.

Very well. That only adds another evilence that metallic money cannot be counted on to remain "honest," although it may be at limes.

According to the definition of the goldbugs, According to the definition of the goldougs, there never can be an houset dollar maintained in the United States or elsewhere, for that matter, and it is not their desire to have the honest dollar. An honest dollar would not answer their purpose. They want the dishonest dollar for dishonestly filching dishonest interest out of the borrowers of the land and let the public be d-d.

The people of the west and south will submit to Wall street dictation up to a certain date, not very far in the future, when they will throw off this goldbug yoke and take a hand in making and handling more of the honest dollars than have fallen to their share during the past decade. The rumblings of discontent can be heard now and it will break forth in a storm one of these days, and the Wall street money changers will be driven from the position of dictators of the policy of the country

Stanton's Poems.

I have just been glancing through the exquisite poems of Frank L. Stanton compiled in bookform and entitled "Songs of a Day."

Mr. Stanton's thoughts are music voiced in words of such sweetness and purity that the very strains. From The Gairesville, Ga., Eagle. The Atlanta Constitution still keeps in the lead of our great southern dailles. It spares neither pains for expense in gathering news While we often differ with it in political and economic questions, we cannot do without it, and when we fail to get it there is an hiatus, so to speak, in our office. As an evidence that it is still prosperous and has an immense patronage, it has lately changed from six lumns to the page to seven, and has put on a new dress, making it exceedingly neat in typographical appearance, as well as capable of containing an additional amount of interesting reading matter. Taken all in all The Constitution is a first-class newspaper, and one that the people can't do well with-

Judge Clarke's Decision

From The Columbus Enquirer-Sun.

The decision reported to have been rendered by Judge Marshall J. Clarke in the superior court of Fulton county, holding that all kinds of advertisements in Sunday newspapers are illegal, and the price of them cannot not be collected at law, is of the greatest important beat in the control of the contro the price of them cannot not be collected at law, is of the greatest importance both to newspaper publishers and to advertisers. Judge Clarke is an able, clear-headed jurist, and he enjoys to a rare degree the confidence of the Georgia bar. His ruling on this question will therefore command serious attention throughout the state, and its review by the supreme court will be careful with some anylety.

and its review by the supreme court will be awaited with some anxiety.

Under Judge Clarke's construction of the law the Sunday newspaper is illegal, notwithstanding the fact that the work necessary to its preparation is practically accomplished on Saturday and Saturday night. All these years the newspapers have been violating the Sunday law, and church people, the judges and juries have been permitting themselves to read and enjoy illegally published exercises. selves to read and enjoy illegally publish papers.

While The Enquirer-Sun has the greatest respect and deference for Judge Clarke, we cannot at all agree with him in this construction of the law, and we have no idea that he will be sustained by the supreme court if the question should be submitted to that tribunal.

If, however, the supreme court should determine Judge Clarke's view to be the law, every daily newspaper in Georgia would be compelled to sus-pend its Sunday edition. Some of the daily pa-pers now, in observance of the Sabbath do not issue Monday morning, practically all of the work on such an issue being necessarily done on Sunday. The enforcement of such a law would be a revival of obsolete Puritanism, which, besides working a great and unnecessary hardship on publishers, could not fail to be obnexious to the public sentiment in Georgia, and the legislature would be asked to interfere by the enactment of a Sunday law that would not be unreasonable in its requirements, nor offend the intelligence of the people of Georgia. of Georgia.

REDUCING COTTON PRODUCTION-A Wartime Incident That Occurred

From The Mobile Register To the Editor of The Register-When hear & sensible man advocate the planting of less cotton this spring to force the advance in price in the future, I am forcibly re-minded of a public meeting called by Major W. H. Huurphries, Hamp Smith and other prominent citizens in 1862, in the interest of the confederate cause. chants' exchange, on St.Francis filled with our most prominent citizens. When I relate the object of the call, as out d by the speaker, you will hardly believe but I relate the truth and history, and hope many of your readers will class the scheme with that of advice to plant less cot ton to advance the price.

This was about the argument of the speaker. The south was full of cotton on plantations: England was bound to have the ner manufacturers from starving; she was standing in her own light, not to recognize the confederate states; hence, to convince her that the south was in dead earnest in the fight for independence, and that there was danger of her losing our cotton, and, further, to open her eyes to her peril, and force recognition of the confederate states, the south should burn a large portion of the cotton plantations.

I forget what plan was proposed to satisfy the planters, but suppose they were to be paid in bends and confederate notes. The first speaker to ridicule the scheme was the venerable old cotton factor of Mobile and Montgomery. Colonel Harrison. Never will I forget his looks when he exclaimed, "Burn the cotton! Burn the cotton! Why, you had just as well burn our portfolios, with all of our mortgages, bills receivable, etc. Are they not all based upon cotton?"

The next was Colonel Garland Goode, father The next was Colonel Garland Goode, father of the doctor, one of the strongest minded men of that day, who was followed by the able ex-Governor John A. Winston, who for sound judgment had few equals. Suffice to say, the meeting, without acting on the call, hastily ended. The excitement was great. Several expected fights had to be compro-

THE RIGHT SORT OF TALK.

From The Albany, Ga., Daily Herald. From The Albany, Ga., Daily Heraid.
The Heraid likes the way Senator Hill talked to the people at Birmingham. He put the democratic party and democratic success ahead of everything and everybody else. Here is an extract from his speech which must challenge the ad-from his speech which must challenge the admiration of every true democrat:

"It is not essential who the candidate of the democratic party may be. The great point is to achieve a victory for democratic principles in November next. I pledge you the state of New York. I pledge New York's electoral vote for the democratic party. I need not say to you how important that victory will be to the future of this country. As this country goes this fall, so in my judgment will its control remain for many years. If we are true to our party we shall be true to our country." And in the same speech he said:

And in the same speech he said:

"I have no patience with that set of men who are constantly speaking in favor of non-partisanship. I believe in an aggressvie and courageous fight. I will exert every influence of party organization to build up and not belittle the party. I will do this because I think the principles of my party are essential to the welfare of my country, and, therefore, I am observing the best and highest interests of the country when I insist upon it."

Now, it would be very hard for any man to improve on these utterances from a democratic standpolift, and they will make friends for Mr. Hill wherever they reach the people. It will be seen that Senator Hill pledges New York's electoral vote to the democratic nominee. There is no reservation about it to indicate that he entertains any doubt about his being able to "deliver the goods," either. And we like the way he talks about being a democrat on purpose and in enruest. His idea of an aggressive campaign is the right one, too, and is the only one upon which the democrats can hope to win the fight in November.

one, too, and is the only one upon which the democrats can hope to win the fight in November. Such talk as Senator Hill has been indulging in is refreshing, especially when it comes from a democratic leader in New York, the home of mugwumpery and Wall street.

BAZAINE'S FIRST WIFE.

A Brave Soldier's Sad and Sensation grace.

From The New York Recorder, The French council of state has just thorized Captain Joseph Bazaine of th Fifty-Third Infantry regiment, statione at Nantes, to change his name to that of "Beauclair." The captain is a nepher of the ex-Marshal Bazine, who died a few years ago in exile and penury at Madrid Captian Beauclair, as he is to be called henceforth, found that the name of his uncle was a serious source of trouble an unpleasantness to him, both as regards his military duties and his social relations. He is not by any means a popular man having already on one occasion been sub-jected to disciplinary neasures for the mai treatment of men under his command, and treatment of men under his command, and I suppose that the additional fact of baring the name of Bazaine rendered him an object of universal dislike in the army.

Marshal Bazaine's widow is still living in Mexico, the country in which she was born, and yet retains her husband's name. Few people are aware that she was his second wife.

The marshal's first wife was one of the most fascinating of the bevy of beautiful women who constituted the entourage of the Empress Eugenie. She died under the region of the transfer of the the Empress Engenie. She died under ter-rible tragical circumstances in 1864. Her escapades brought her into contact with men of extremely shady character, and one morning in the summer of 1864 her dead body was discovered in a deserted villa at Croissy, one of the suburbs of Paris. The head was almost severed from the trunk by a gash across the throat.

Investigation revealed circumstances is Investigation revealed circumstances in connection with the murder that led the government to make every effort in its power to keep the affair from becoming public. But the news soon leaked out, and in an incredibly short time the newspape filled with the most revolting detail the whole affair.

The general was passionately attached to The general was passionately attached to his lovely wife, and his devotion to her, as well as his blind confidence in her virtue, were well known at the Tuileries. Both on public and personal grounds Napoleon was determined that at all cost the new should be gently broken to the general. Accordingly he dispatched one of his favorite aides-de-camp to Mexico, intrusting him with a long autograph letter, and with the task of communicating to the general the death of Mme. Bazaine.

At the same time the emperor adopted

At the same time the emperor adopted the extraordinary measure of laying an embargo on all ships about to depart from Mexico and prevented the dispatch of any of the ordinary letter or newspaper mail by the steamer which bore his messenger to Bazaine.

Unfortunately, the vessel was greatly delayed by bad weather, and it was not until a week after the day on which abought to have arrived, that Napokon's aide-de-camp reached the French headquarters in person and executed his mission.

The general appeared almost brokenhearted and utterly crushed by the news of his wife's death. But on the following duy he happened to light upon a Paris paper, which had found its way to Mexico vis the United States, and the first thing that met his eye was the heading of a pargraph entitled "Assassinat de la Gererale Bazaine." No detail was spared in the account given of her murder and all of the attendant circumstances.

The general never uttered a word, but his ordinarily high-colored face became ghastly pale, and he withdrew to his tent taking the newspaper with him. For the space of three days he remained invisible to all, refusing either to eat or drink. Then he issued forth again among his troops and went about his business as if nothing had happened, never by a single wood series. happened, never by a sing referring to his murdered if she had never existed.

Three months later he met a beautiful Mexican girl, the present Mme. Bazains, whom he married before the end of the year, and who now, with her two daughters, survives him. It was she who played such a prominent and romantic role at the time of his escape from his prison in the Island of St. Marguerite.

Officer Jim Kemp is red hot over a joint perpetrated at his expense Friday night. Mr. W. E. Hilisman placed a thermometer on the outer wall of the Hilsman & Agal Co.'s store before closing up, and requested Officer Barron to notice it at intervals through the night, so that he might know the lowest temperature reached. At 12 o'clock Mr. Kemp went on duty and relieved Officer Barron, who told him, for a joke, that the weather bureau had telegraphed orders to the mayor to the effect that a record of what the thermometer resistered was to be taken every hour, and that the mayor had ordered the police officers to take this record. And all through the long, cold hours of the morning Office Kemp left some cozy nook and went us take the hourly record of what the thermometer registered, only to find in the morning that the whole thing was a joke. He is very wrathy, and a city official has suggested that the thermometer take the place of a watchman's clock in the future.

After the Georgia Road. The next case was one brought by the Georgia commission for towns along the Georgia road. The complaint was that a higher charge is made on freight from east ern points to Madison, Social Circle and Covington than to Atlanta.

Colonel E. R. Dorsey, general freight agent of the Georgia railroad for fourteen years, testified that his road has to meet at Atlanta the competition of shorter lines rom eastern and northern points. For in stance, the Ocean Steamship Company and the Central Railroad Company can bring freight from Boston, New York and Philadelphia by way of Savannah and the Cen

Then there is another water and rail route by way of Brunswick, and still another through Norfolk. There is a fourth competing line from Baltimore to Atlanta, by way of the Merchants' and Miners' by way of the Merchants and Miners Steamship Company to Savannah and thence to Atlanta by rail. The rate on buggies from New York to Social Circle is $1.44 per hundred, while to Atlanta it considerably less.
Mr. Berner, cross-examining, asked if all the competing lines between the eastern markets and Atlanta are not part rail and part water. Colonel Dorsey replied in the negative, stating that there are some allrail lines. The distances by way of Challeton Canada and Banazariek to Charleston, Savannah and Brunswick to Atlanta are about the same. Within the past two years a shorter rail route has been opened between Savannah and Madison than the one around by Atlanta or Augusta, the old basing line. Before long the basing mileage must be changed in accordance with the distance from Savannah by way of the Macon and Covington road to Madison.

The rate from New York to Madison by Augusta is $1.44, which is made by adding to the through rate to Augusta the Georgia road's local, 48 cents. That is the Georgia road's proposition. Mr. Berner asked the witness who has been operating the Central and the Macon and Covington. Colonel Dorsey replied that the attorney would have to ask some one else that question. In addition, there is the Clyde line of steamships to Jacksonville, then 250 points. In addition, there is the Clyde line of steamships to Jacksonville, then 250 miles of rail haul to the Chattahoochee, and thence up the river. The rates from New York to Jacksonville by the Clyde line are about the same as from New York to Savannah by the Ocean Steamship Company. There is no such thing as one line making a rate from New York to Columbus, said Mr. Haas. "We don't add locals in this territory here complaining. We fix upon a maximum rate. Leesburg is one of the points complaining of having a higher rate than Americus, the traffic passing through Americus to get to Leesburg. The rate from New York to Leesburg is $1.31 on first-class freight, and that is the maximum rate for that territory. We claim that the value of the service which we render to the shipper at intermediate points is greater than to the shipper at function points. Rates are not necessarily lower at junction points. The rates now are considered reasonable by the roads. They are not high enough to allow the roads to make a reasonable profit, say 7 per cent."

The specialties which will be produced in this cherming little play are all original. The dances to be given have never been danced before. Professor Agostini having arranged it expressly for the production of "Bairubaldour." Among the clever people that are to appear in the specialty acts are: Mr. Shearer and Mr. Wallace, in clever imitations, M ss McGill, of Canada, who possesses a well trained mezzo soprano voice, will render a popular aria from one of the operas; Miss Coates will be very fascinating in a "song and dance;" Misses Stockdell and McMi far in their "rope dance" will be most cordially received. This is a very artistic and uni ue affair. "The Cascade," by Misses Holliday and Nash, is delightfully given. Miss Hettie Jones will sing a beautiful "Polka-Waltz Chant," from L. Arditti. The "Cranoviene," by Miss Pet Strahan, is captivating "Paplion." as acted by Miss Wadten, is per fect in it grace and beauty. A "frog dance will be given by Mr. Leroy. Clifton brothers do a cown act which is great. "LaTosca," a very pretty dance, is an exquisite thing and will be executed by five young misses. Everything that appertains to the production of "Balrubaldour" is new and original The last rehearsal will take place this morning at 16 o'clock at the Zouave armory.

Last night it was pouring rain in perfect torrents but this charming company of artists were greeted by the same packed house that has cheered them every night of their week's engagement here.

Everybody has at one time enjoyed tap popular opera "Fantinitza." It was referred right cleverly, indeed, last night.

Thomas Persee as war of respondent was a good actor. His superb and lyric tenor was as charming in this role as it has been in all of the other operas the company has played here, and caught the admiration of every listener. Mr. Persee's tenor is one of the brilliant parts certainly.

Miss Gaillard is another of this company who has laid claim to the dmiration of Atlantians. Few contraltos are as rice and half so profound as hers. Last night she played Fantinitza most catchingly, and made her most decided "hit" of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Gaillard deserve to be called leading artists, as they are.

A Careful Estimate of the Cost of Making Cotton.

Jackson, Ga., March 24, 1892.—Editor Constitution: We enclose you an estimate of the cost for producing cotton on one, two and three acres, making one bale of 500 pounds. This estimate was made by Mr. J. L. Barkely, one of the most painstaking, as well as successful farmers in the country. You will observe that where we make only one bale to three acres, which is about the state average, the cost is about 10% cents; where one bale is made on two acres, about 7% cents; with one bale to one acre it is a fraction less than 5 cents. Of course there is about four dollars and fifty cents' worth of seed in each bale of cotton. We think you will find this a fair and correct estimate. Yours truly, SMITH & ETHERIDGE.

Mableton, Ga., March 24, 1892.—Editor Constitution: Seeing in your Sunday's edition the discussion on this subject, I offer briefly a few thoughts to be considered by those engaged in the production of cotton.

In the first place, land which will produce from one to two bales of cotton per acre in Georgia, is one to two bales of cotton per acre in Georgia. is very scarce when we compare the whole number of acres cultivated in cotton.

one to two bales of cotton per acre in Georgia. is very scarce when we compare the whole number of acres cultivated in cotton.

It is true that a farmer may select from his 100 or 1,000 acres, the richest and most productive plats, using all the barn lot manures, and in some cases all the cotton seed that was made on theremainder, or poorer part of the farm, and make cotton on which the labor, doubtless, would not cost more than 3 cents per pound. But what is to become of the poor ones? Figure and see. In calculating the cost of the production of cotton, corn, oats, or any other crops, the whole field, farm, or belt, as in this case, must be taken, and not a select part. A few years ago, I was engaged in the mercantile business in your city, but on account of falling health was compelled to retire from the business, and have turned my attention mostly to the study of the soil, giving it much thought for ten years. I can say with my experience and observation, taking the whole cotton region of Georgia and not a select part, the producer of cotton cannot afford to raise it at even 6 3-16 cents, the price of middling today. The farmers should reduce his cotton acres at least one-third and plant other crops. I always raise corn, hay and other crops in more than the quantity consumed by my stock, but shall reduce my cotton this year from 225 acres to 150, planting the remainder in other crops, and I believe every farmer in the cotton bett should do the same. Should they fail to do so, doubtless they will use it by acting at once.

I believe the press could do much for the farmer and be a blessing to the country if it would insist on a reduction of cotton acres, and the papers cannot say too much about it just now, as the planting season is here.

FLORIDA LADY'S TROUBLE HERE.

She Comes to Atlanta to Secure Possessio of Her Children, Whe Have Been Taken from Her.

A young mother searching for her chil-

It has been but a short while since Mrs.

Lucy ripton first came to Atlanta. That was in last October and then she came from Key West, Fla., where she left a husband to whom she had been married but a little while before.

The separation on her part was due to the startling discovery that the man had a wife and two children living somewhere again. Shortly after her arrival here, twins were born to Mrs. Tipton at the Providence infirmary. She was in a rather distressing condition at the time, and the ladies connected with the Home for the Friendless took a deep interest in her. The mother would not part with the lit tle ones—a boy and a girl—and was especially anxious that they be not taken to the home. Under these circumstances it was agreed that they be placed with good, responsible families and be raised under the est of surroundings. With this understanding the mother finally listened to the advice and persuasions of others and tearfully parted with her little ones. She now charges that there has been

By Private Wire to A. P. Youngblood. CHICAGO, March 25.—With the exception of Berlin and Paris the general markets of the world have assumed a much better tone today. The attempt of exporters to make purchases on the basis of yesterday's and Wednesday's decline has failed, they being able to obtain but very little grain without advancing prices The English markets are apparently higher with a The English markets are apparently higher with a good demand and better tone. Berlin was higher yesterday in spite of the decline disewhere, but today it seemed to have lost the advance. The same feature seems to be noted in Parls. We are still awaiting the action of exporters, believing that to be the key to the legitimate situation. In addition to that the speculative trade will be influenced spasmodically by the crop reports. Should the next thirty days demonstrate outselved that the spectage in acreace and the low juite clearly that the shortage in acreage and the lov condition of foreign crops prove to us as unfavorable a reports would seem now to indicate, the speculatly est will become quite large and have a tendency sympathetic improvement on the New York exchange of about 8 points, part of which had, however, been lost by 1 o'clock under bear seiling, and such liquidation of April contracts as was induced by a rather free issue of notices for that month. New Orleans receipts tomorrow are estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000 bales. The interior movement for the week promises to be exceptionally light, hardly more than 12,000 bales, against 22,000 bales last week and 22,000 bales last year. The stocks lose heavily, and it is evident that the port movement during the week has been largely at the Flour, Grain and Moal.

Unquestionably the very light receipts of the week are in a measure due to the inclement weather which has prevailed generally throughout the south. To how great an extent they will increase next week is a question, and the course of prices will probably be governed by its solution. The talk of probable war with England as a result of the Behring sea controversy is not, we think, entitled to much consideration, although to roundings that have come to light, receipts for the week having proven much lighter than the estimates both for the ports and the interior. The former is under [10,000 bales and the latter about 12,000. Notwithstanding this, however, there seemed no animation and but little new buying. In fact, as far as we can observe the pressure of April notices has caused some liquidation, and the selling has to some extent preponderated today. Otherwise we should have done better. Next week's movement will doubtiess tell us whether receipts have been retarded by the weather or not. In any event, we will henceforth compare with very liberal figures for this season of the year, and unless we are greatly disappointed we believe the result will show more moderate figures this year. Young Mr. Jones Wooes a Mississippi Miss Quite Romantically.

HE READ ABOUT HER BRAVE EXPLOIT

And Decided That She Was the One Thing Needful for His Happiness. The Sequel.

The romantic vein in human nature crops out under almost any circumstances, and in all classes of human beings who have such a thing in their composition. Nowhere does it show itself more often or more delightfully than in the world of love-making and matchmaking. A conclusive demonstration of this statement is furnished in a prettily colored and nicely flavored romance, the sequel to which was told by the presence of a young bride and groom at the Kimball house yesterday.

And it is not an every-day romance, in which John Smith married Sallie Brown and lived happy ever after. It is one of that rare sort that novels tell of, but which are seldom found in this real and material

The first chapter of this romance in real life opens in Mississippi, near Tupelo, and a pretty, buxom country girl is the heroine the name is immaterial. She did the work about the house and was one of those bustling, busy, practical girls who are found on farms. And although her time was altogether taken up by the farmwork, she had time to indulge in those little romantic dreams that flit through the heads of pretty women-but that's another

The young lady was alone and busy at work. The experienced eye of the vaga-bond took in the situation at a glance.

"Your money er yer life," he demanded, in a fearful tone.

The situation was alarming, but the rosy-cheeked country girl hever once lost her pretty head.

"The money is in the next room, sir," she said, with some show of deference, "just step in and I will show you, sir."

The tramp, somewhat surprised, followed the young lady into the adjoining room, feeling elated over his easy victory.

But his happy thoughts were short-lived. As he stepped into the doorway of the room, the muzzle of an ugly-looking army gun faced him.

And the young girl held it, and fingered with the triggers with a degree of familiarity that was alarming to the adventurous creature who stood at the dangerous end of it.

"Now, then," she said, just as coolly as

"Now, then," she said, just as coolly as could be, "I guess you don't want money or my life either?"

"No, ma'am; oh, no, ma'am!—How could you think? If you will just let me by, I'm sure I will not harm you!"

But his profuse apologies didn't secure his release. The plucky farm girl marched him at the end of a gun to a neighbor and he was soon in the hands of officers.

The incident got into the papers and was read by newspaper readers all over the country.

Among the chousands of others, this no-tice fell under the wondering gaze of the young and romantic Mr. W. M. Jones, of Dekle, Ga. He read it over twice, en-raptured.

"By gosh." he declared, emphatically, "that girl's got the right kind of pluck. She's the girl for me."

He gave the matter more than passing consideration and the upshot of it was that he wrote to her. He stated facts in that letter and paid profuse compliments to the bravery of the young girl.

He soon got a reply, and before many moons the two were carrying on a regular

A few letters breathing out the romantic spirits of the young couple—a proposal of marriage by Mr. Jones.

The marriage occurred at the bride's home on Wednesday, and the couple left the same day for Birmiugham. They spent a day 'n the Magic City and came to Atlanta. They registered at the Kimball vesterday morning. The bridal chamber yesterday morning. The bridal chamber was occupied by a member of the interstate commission and the clerk was forced to assign them to a less luxurious apartment. But when the rain stops and the clouds move away, Contractor Gibbons will resume work, and within two days will have the grounds completed thoroughly. The rain prevented the games in Macon between Ward's men and the Macon team, and the visitors were earnestly requested to remain and entertain the public with some of their long, hard base hits and wonderful fielding. Ward opened communication with Atlanta, and secured Tuesday, Wedwith Atlanta, and secured Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, instead of yesterday, today and Monday.

FRANK PEYTON

May Be a Free Man in a Very Few Days. His Mother's Plea.

His Mother's Plea.

The case against young Frank Peyton may be settled. In fact there is a strong probability of such a turn of affairs.

Yesterday Mr. John J. Woodside, who was the victim of the young man's ingratitude, received a letter from Mrs. Peyton. It was written from Chicago, and the wife of the renting agent's old business partner pleaded most carnestly for her boy's release.

The young man left home a few months boy's release.

The young man left home a few months ago through some misunderstanding due to trouble with a woman. That, however, has been entirely forgotten in young Peyton's present trouble, and the family is anxious to have him come back to Chicago.

Mr. Woodside thinks it very probable that he will consent to a settlement of the case and decline to prosecute the erring case and decline to prosecute the erring young man. The amount involved is over two hundred dollars.

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER-The Queer Complications Built Around th

Saine Family. When the time shall have come, as is is bound to do, that the history of moon shining in Georgia will form the most unique and picturesque features of the state's history, the Saine family will deserve a full chapter.

And there could not be a better or more entertaining chapter in many volumes.

Moonshiners to the manner born, con-Moonshiners to the manner born, connoisseurs of good mountain dew with an eye for a fine location for a distillery, the Saine family, of Lumpkin county, has made a reputation in the United States court, which few other families have done. There are five of the Saine boys—rough, rugged and hard as pine knots—and every one of them has figured in some distillery troubles. It's inherent, it seems to run in the family. Last week one of these Saine boys was arraigned in the United States court. The case was no more serious than the ordinary charge of moonshiping makes one, but a great and formidable array of witnesses appeared for the defense. One of the witnesses was Saine's brother. He swore for his brother. Strang to say Mike Saine, another brother, appeared as a witness on the side of the prosecution. He gave in some telling exidence against his brother—the boy he had played with, the companion of his youth. As a result Saine got thirteen months and a fine of $100 besides. But fale works strange capers if she has just a little time and it required but a little time to bring about a thing which looks rather like a just retribution. And the old adage of "he who laughs last" gets in the heatiest chuckle was verified quite conclusively. Yesterday Mike Saine was brought up sively.

Yesterday Mike Saine was brought up resterday Mike Saine was brought up in the United States court on the same charge of which he had sworn his brother was guilty.

And to carry out the novel coincidence two of Saine's brothers were there to tratify against him. The evidence was conclusive and then the fact that it was about his fifth time convicted him.

his fifth time convicted him.

Fifteen months' imprisonment was the hard sentence the judge pronounced up in him. It was retribution with interest.

nim. It was retribution with interest.

Saine was carried to jail and locked up in the "rock." He is a hard looking customer with the yellowest of beards and a prominent red nose. As he fingled the big iron cuff which chained him to another prisoner he said:

"Yes I get it good this time. Fifteen nonths? Purty yood time to be shut up."

And shut up with his brother whom he swore against, is not their association together likely to be highly pleasant?

Such is one single instance in the history of moonshining.

THE UNITED VETERANS. A Large Delegation Will Go from Atlant

General John B. Gordon, the command-

Atlanta, Ga., March 25, 1892.—Having been appointed aid-de-camp on the staff of General John B. Gordon, of the United Confederate Veterans, and directed to urge all associations and camps in the state to join them. I wish to bring the matter to your attention and to urge that your camp take action at once in the matter, and send delegates to the meeting at New Orleans on the 8th of April. A membership fee of $2 for each camp is all that is required, and the annual dues are 10 cents for each member.

It is unnecessary for me to speak of the importance and necessity of this united organization in carrying out its objects, which are to bind us closer to each other, to preserve the history of the great struggle, and protect and succor the disabled and needy among us.

THE MARKETS.

While looking over our stock a lady remarked: "Why, Mr. Hoyt, I thought the markets were bare but it seems like you have everything. Send me a bunch of fresh radishes, beets, carrots and turnips and, th, isn't this lettuce fine. I want some of it sure. And just look at those strawberries, they look like they were just picked. But tell me, what have you in fish, I have so much trouble in getting good mackerel."

We assured Mrs. Goodtnate that we had fine, fat Norwegian mackerel. If you have never eaten a fine, fancy bloater, you do not know what mackerel are. They are not the ordinary, poor, tasteless mackerel, but each one is selected for its fine quality and flavor.

Our Yarmouth smoked herring are very the ordinary, poor tasteless mackerel, but each one is selected for its fine quality and flavor.

Our Yarmouth smoked herring are very fine, try them.

For dinner, what could be nicer than Modenamen's crabs. With every two-pound can we give eight shells, and it makes a very tempting dish.

Then, we nave limite neck clams, imported whole herring, extra quality Columbia river salmon, Block Island Jobster, shrimps, and every variety of anneed fish.

We have estecially fancy French sardines packed in genuine o've oil.

A nice clam chowder, properly prepared, commends itself to the taste of a great many, and to such we can recommend our brand, as they are the very best.

Now a word as to dried fruits. In dried fruits we can satisfy the most fastidious, both as to quality and variety. Our evaporated after fruits we can satisfy the most fastidious, both as to quality and variety. Our evaporated after fruits we can satisfy the most fastidious, both as to puality and variety. Our evaporated are fancy, and the home dried very fine. Our pears are first halved, then carefully evaporated, and retain all the flavor of the fresh fruit. Then comes the home-dried blackberries and the California dried plums. You will always find the eviporated or dried fruits very convenient and very palatable, and when the fresh fruits are out of market, as at present, it is a very fine, try palatable, and when the fresh fruits are out of market, as at present, it is a very fine substitute. You will always find the eviporated each article, and you can always be sure of getting only the best and Teshect of each.

EISEMAN BROS

We are ready to begin on your Spring Tailoring to measure now. About all the new fabrics are in Scotch, English, French, German. Whole pieces, not just samples. They make an international showthe most generous exhibition of Tailoring-to-Order materials in the acceptation of that term by merchant tailors—that you will see on southern soil. Not only our goods—our tailors are ready. They need no praise to you. Whatever progress their craft knows they know it.

Spring Overcoats.

They're to the front once more! Two thousand of the finest. We make these Overcoats perfect as artists make pictures perfect-by rule and rote, but under the direction of Tailoring skill that knows how to make pattern and style full of their own ideals of beauty. For convenience sake we make a dividing line of silk-lined and not silk-lined. Half of them are silk-lined, $12 to $35; half of them are not, $10 to $25. But there's no such dividing line in their style They're all of the richest.
